1. Read the passage and answer the questions that follow:-

African are undoubtedly a very enduring race and have the capacity to utilize the available natural resources for the betterment of life. The biggest challenge however, is to identify ways and means of creating an environment that is likely to encourage development in Africa.

Perhaps the greatest strategy is to develop political structures and government institutions that have the capacity to formulate and implement genuine poverty alleviation strategies. Administrative arrangements that should not be effective if we don't fight corrupting. We should ensure that leaders and government agents become answerable to the tax payers. The public should be educated on the ills of corruption those who have stolen public funds must be made to return it or face the full force of the law. A gain people known to have stashed money in foreign banks should be forced to repatriate that money so as to improve cash flow in our economies.

Apart from this, African countries must find a way of solving their internal conflict without involving international community; after all we are all brothers with a common cause. The need to unite and exist as unitary state should be stressed as this overrides clans and tribal rights or sentiments that fuel animosity. The African union should be strengthened to enable it to arbitrate intra and inter rates disputes. The resulting peace will provide a suitable environment for economic growth and set us on the road to recovery and prosperity.

Another solution would be to develop rural – based economics since the bulk of our population lives in the rural areas. Industries and other process farm produce and those that manufacture farm inputs, machinery and implements should be located in rural areas. Similarly, mining concerns should establish processing plants near mines. Such industries will naturally recruit manpower from the locality involved and consequently reduce the incidence of rural – urban migration. Setting up industries in the rural areas will necessitate development of infrastructure, which will open up the rural areas for business. This will further encourage agricultural expansion and increase food production to counter perennial food shortages in Africa. For instance development of dairy and beef processing industry in the rural areas will encourage development of suitable livestock keeping and probably bring to an end the loss of cattle to drought. A rural based economy will basically raise the income of the rural people and bridge the disparity between the rich and the poor.

We could also introduce appropriate technology in exploitation of natural resources and wealth creation. Since imported technology to maintain,Africans should tap the local expertise to develop technologies appropriate to our needs. Home grown technology should help us alleviate African food insecurity for utilizing river and lake water for irrigation and by harvesting wind and solar energy.

Lastly, our regional economic units such ECOWAS, SADC and EAC should be transformed into common markets by removing unnecessary tariffs of goods at various entry points so as to realize the benefits of a common market.

The people of Africa should continually seek a better life. We have the resources; the manpower and the capacity to make things move.

2. Read the excerpt below and then answer the questions that follow.

The envelope has been addressed to mark who opened it, read the letter and passed it to her. “At least she is from the country”, he said sounding a bit odd.

She looked at him then lowered her eyes to the letter. It was characteristically Aoro – brief and to the point. She felt kind of sorry to Mark. First there had been Becky who had left home unceremoniously only to return with a white man in tow. A very nice man but apparently not nice enough for Becky. He has found out that she was having an affair during his trip abroad and has sued to divorce. Now she was leaving a lone with the children, financially well off, but unhappy. It was one way to enjoy thrills of an affair, but a different thing altogether to have a carte blanche to do exactly as you pleased. John had terribly hurt of course and mark had been furious with her.

Then Tony had joined priest hood – Mark resisted it at first but recently, during Tony’s ordination he had been full of pride for his son - whose face has shown with joy and youthful dedication. Vera’s case had been the hardest to accept. Mark thought of the World of Vera, and differed to her with everything. Then she had arrived home one day and declared she wanted to join a catholic prelature of Opus Dei as a non-marrying member. But he had eventually accepted because he loved her. Because she looked so radiant. Anything that could bring such joy and serenity could not be such bad. It was a pity though that she could not wear a veil or a habit. That way he could at least have bragged a little to her friends. His children were a source of great envy to his less lucky friends. Vera for one is a fully qualified electronics expert and had a lucrative job in the city with a large salary and all sorts of benefit women like that tented to marry the most amazing wimps and Mark had held his breath in fear. But in the end all Vera wanted to dedicate her life and her life and her work to God, and there was no turning her back. So Elizabeth secretly hoped that Aoro would bring back a nice girl – naturally a Luo like himself – who would proceed to have many children – all a nice , ordinary black colour.

3. Read the passage and answer the questions that follow:-

Along time ago there was a man and his wife they had build their hut in the middle of the forest but they had fenced round homestead to keep wild animals from entering the compound. Now this man used to go to smithy to join other smiths in iron work. This time, when he wend he left his wife heavy with child.

In this forest, there was a big ogrecame into the compound with a heavy load of firewood. When he brought the load to the compound, he dropped it outside with a big thud of this firewood.

He went inside the hut where he made some porridge. He drank it. To the expectant woman he said, "Woman with child, take this. You don't want. I shall eat it for you". And he ate all the porridge. Now this happened everyday for many days and the expectant mother grew as weak as the reeds by the riverside. When the time came for her delivery, the ogre crudely assisted her but he did not give her food.

Now the woman continued to be starved and grew weaker and weaker. She became worried yet she did not lose heart. Every day she used to spread her castor oil seeds in the sun, a dove came and helped herself to some seeds. The woman said to her, "you always come to eat my seeds. Will you go if I send you?"

Said the dove, "let me eat my fill and then you can send me wherever you want. The dove ate until she had had enough.

"Where do you want to send me?"

"Go to the smithy and when you see the smiths, sing these words:

Mutuiukutuaisaangalai x2
Mukauniwasyaiyeisaangalalai
Yisikuyanakwivua iii
Saangalalaisa.
(Blacksmithsmithing on your ironx2
Your wife has given birth
Assisted by an ogre
Which eat all it has prepared?

And when the dove went to the smiths and sang the song:

Blacksmithing on your iron x2
Your wife has given birth
Assisted by an ogre
This eats al it has prepared.

“What is this thing – of a – bird saying, disturbing our work?”Said one man throwing a stone at the dove.
But the bird perched herself on another tree and sang again.

Blacksmith smithing on your iron x2
Your wife has given birth
Assisted by an ogre
Which eats all it has prepared?

This time the men said;

Haiya, perhaps this bird has a message for us. Who of us left the wife heavy with a child?”

Said one of the men, “I left my wife heavy,”

Eei, take your things. Go home. This message might be yours. Your wife might be given birth and she is in danger.”

At home, the ogre was stilltormenting the woman. He used to go to the shamba, dig out the sweat potatoes, prepared them and offer them to her when they are already in the mouth, “Woman with child take this. You don’t want it; I’ll eat it for you”.

One day when the sun stood in the middle of the compound, her husband arrived from the smithy. He said himself in the darkness corner of the hut and awaited the ogre. When the ogre arrived he cooked, ate all the food and slept on the necked floor. From his mouth came green, yellow and red foam that was a sign that he was first a sleep.

It was then that the Blacksmith came down and speared him through and through until he was dead. Then the man and his moved and build a new home another place.
